

Climate acts through developmental state.

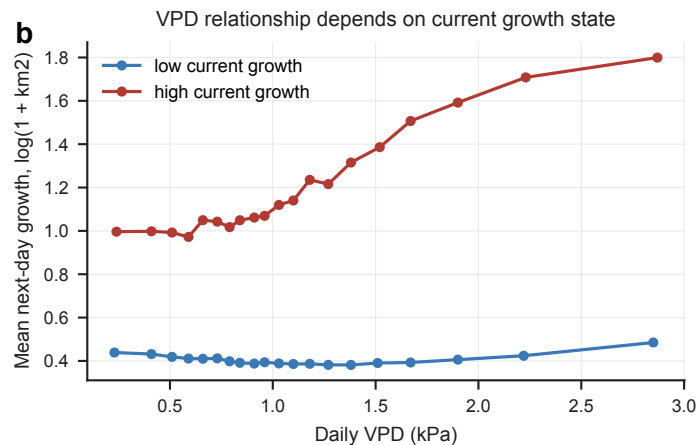

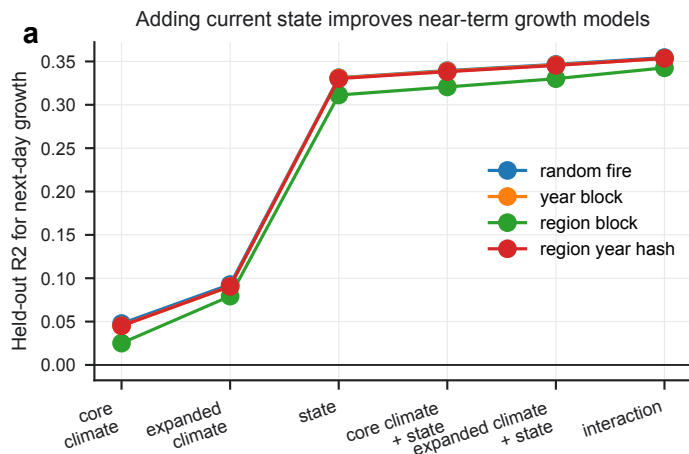

The same weather exposure can mean different things depending on when it occurs in a fire history.

Climate exposure is read through fire state.

The red line is daily VPD scaled within each fire. The blue bars are daily growth. The same exposure can occur before, during, or after rapid expansion.

State models use only information available by day t.

Takeaway: climate effects depend on when exposure occurs and on the current developmental state.